

ATP architekten ingenieure joins FactoryXperts

Eschlikon, May 3, 2019 – With retroactive effect from January 1, 2019, ATP architekten ingenieure is now a 30% shareholder of FactoryXperts.

“What drives us, is the question of our customers, how to plan and realize new buildings or rebuilds even better in order to create perfect starting conditions for a successful future with optimal use of resources. We are pleased to have found in ATP a congenial planning partner who also gives us the resources to serve even larger projects and new geographical markets in the future.”, says Roger Bless, CEO of FactoryXperts.

The building competence of ATP is an evolutionary step for us

ATP is the leading integrated planning office in continental Europe, designing production buildings for the food industry for more than 50 years. As an integral planner, ATP assumes overall responsibility for the success of challenging building projects. 800+ architects and engineers at ten locations in DACH and CEE work in interdisciplinary teams consisting of architecture, structural design, technical building services and site supervision, supported by our own consultants as well as research and special planning companies.

We use valuable synergies

FactoryXperts takes over the analysis and process technology consulting in the run-up to building planning. Together with ATP's know-how, FactoryXperts creates a master plan that covers all processes and elements of construction.

The partnership with ATP enables FactoryXperts to take an evolutionary step in architecture. In future, integrated building planning will be based on state-of-the-art digital planning technology (BIM) and ATP's decades of experience in the food industry.

Material flow, machine layout, logistics and production technology planning as well as project management, the supervision of installation and commissioning are accompanied by experienced FactoryXperts experts as usual.

We look forward to working for our customers, because success can be planned!

Consulting: FactoryXperts - Integral planning: ATP architekten ingenieure

“The quality of integral planning is evident right from the start of the project,” explains Christoph M. Achammer, CEO of ATP architekten ingenieure. “We want to understand the core process of a building in detail before we start planning. The relevant know-how of FactoryXperts fits like a puzzle piece into the food expertise of the ATP Group. With the consulting services offered by our Swiss colleagues and ATP’s many years of experience in digital integral planning (BIM), we aim to become the market leader in the bakery products sector in the future.”
